

remotes, wii-motes, and more
Be sure you have a caddy big enough to corral all the remotes that come with modern life. And since you're probably the only one who will remember to use it, you may as well have something cute. (Desktop Caddy by Buckhead Betties, $27.99; organize.com)

a neater tv area

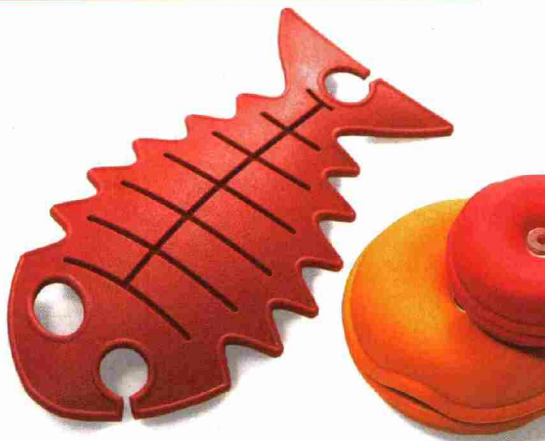

portable storage
Chuck the boxes that all those games came in and keep them in a CD sleeve—even the little DS ones that always turn up under the couch. (Travel CD Case by Swing, $14.99; organize.com)

3 ways to get rid of old movies and games

- donate Try a local charity or school.
- swap With a friend, or with a stranger, at Swaptree.com.
- recycle Ordinary recycling centers won't take CDs and DVDs. So check out CDrecyclingcenter.com. You pay shipping; they'll do the rest.

better than a shelf

Movies are easier for kids to flip through and find if you store them facing forward. Or, hey, it never hurts to have a basket to dump everything in. (Small Wide Strapping Bin, $19.99; containerstore.com)

cord control
Why do wires multiply every time you turn your back? Keep them in check. (Cable fish, $3.99, and cable turtles, $4.99 for mini, $5.99 for small; cableorganizer.com)
