Fine Things to Want and Do

■ BAG TAGS

To gussy up your luggage — and, better yet, help identify it — consider Jenny Krauss Designs' distinctive luggage tags. Handmade in Peru, the tags are as attractive as they are sturdy.

Three layers of material reinforce the hand-stitched embroidery, serving as beautiful backing for the clear acetate-covered I.D. sleeve.

And as a "fair trade" product, each purchased tag provides financial and emotional support to more than 500 Bolivian and Peruvian women artists.

For more information on the tags and other "fair trade" products, visit www.harrietandleo.com.

■ SUPER BOWLS

Made by Vietnamese hill tribe denizens, these Cau Vong bowls are sure to brighten any kitchen. Each bowl has a small, distinct niche on the rim and comes with glossy, brightly hued interiors and a striking black matte exterior. The non-profit organization Craft Link works with the hill tribe people, who make up 10 percent of Vietnam's population, to promote awareness of ethnic crafts and help with production. For more information on these and other crafts, visit www.serrv.org.

■ SUBMERGED SONGS

Once you try SwiMP3, the MP3 player designed for underwater enjoyment, you'll wonder how you ever swam "songless" before. Using bone-conduction sound transfer technology, the device vibrates the inner ear to create sound underwater. Its 256 MB of memory and 8-hour rechargeable battery mean your swimming sessions — whether for pleasure or for fitness — will never be dull again. Visit www.finisinc.com for more underwater products and information.

■ BATTERY BOOSTER

Keep running out of iPhone power? Juice it up with a mophie Juice Pack Air. This slim, protective case houses a rechargeable lithium polymer battery that will allow you to double the time you spend watching movies, listening to tunes or doing whatever it is your latest favorite iPhone app allows. Available in black, white and purple, it has an LED charge-status indicator letting you know exactly how much juice is left. To find out more, visit www.mophie.com.
