COUPLES WITH DAUGHTERS LIKELIER TO DIVORCE – STUDY

HAVING a son to carry on the family name might just help your marriage last.

That's what a new study from the University of California in San Diego and Berkley says, claiming that couples who have boys are more likely to stick together.

According to the study, which was based on data from the U.S. Census, 52,000 first-born daughters younger than 12 couples with a first-born girl are more likely to split than those with a first-born boy.

And when there are as many as three daughters, the odds of divorcing go up 10 percent!

"Fathers are significantly (three percent) less likely to be living with their children if they have daughters versus sons," the researchers reveal.

"We estimate that in any given year, roughly 52,000 first-born daughters younger than 12 years, and all their siblings, would have had a resident father if they had been boys."
